— Keith Mabrey, Co-owner

Two Bainbridge Island automotive businesses recently certified as EnviroStars: Bainbridge Island Auto Repair and Jerry's Auto Rebuild. Both businesses earned five stars, the highest level of certification.

Gailene and Keith Mabrey built Bainbridge Island Auto Repair in 1994. In 1999 they purchased Jerry's Auto Rebuild, which has operated next door since the 1970s. With his lifelong automotive experience, Keith Mabrey has a strong environmental commitment that is reflected in written shop policies and investments in equipment upgrades and improvements. This includes a comprehensive "Employee Environmental Health & Safety Plan" with hazardous waste, air quality, and safety procedures. All Bainbridge Island Auto Repair employees are required to read and follow these procedures.

At Jerry's Auto Rebuild, the Mabeys were preventing pollution with features that include a computerized paint mixing system, high-volume low-pressure (HVLP) paint guns, and an enclosed booth for priming and sanding. Other improvements include: an enclosed paint gun cleaner that reduces solvent vapors; an on-site still to recycle paint wastes; and, secondary containment for the paint mixing room.

Next door at Bainbridge Island Auto Repair, the Mabeys had many good practices in place as well. They recycle shop wastes including scrap metal, oil, oil filters, antifreeze, freon, fluorescent tubes, and other office wastes.

The AAA approved repair shop has also made improvements during the EnviroStars certification process. Some of these improvements include: a new parts washer that uses only soap and water and eliminates the need for hazardous solvent; new secondary containment for hazardous waste and used oil accumulation containers; and, improved battery storage to minimize the risk of a spill in an earthquake
